Abstract

The securing of the national frontier, the improvement of the management of surveillance and control at the state border, with the participation of all the institutions having competences at the border, on the basis of an effective institutional collaboration, represent a major goal of Romania's integration into the European Union.

The process is highly complete, taking into account present and future changes. It asks coherent and flexible strategies and policies, well adapted to the internal and external conditions.

Keywords: border police, securing the state border, risk factors, principles, the cross-border criminal phenomenon.
